

Chad Grundy Biography

Chad Grundy, undertreasurer of the Carolina Conference, is a product of Seventh-day Adventist education, having attended Adventist schools all the way through college. He attended Southern Adventist University where he received a B.S. degree in business administration. His resume includes serving as an accountant at Highland Academy, manager of the Adventist Book Center in the Gulf States Conference and as assistant treasurer of the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference. He moved to the Carolina Conference in 2007 as the Association treasurer, and has served as the undertreasurer since 2011.

Chad is married to a classmate from college, Amy Bennett Grundy, who is a registered nurse. They have three children: Ashley, an Academy senior; Allison, a 8th grader; and Chad Jr., a 7th grader.

Chad also enjoys working with technology and has a great interest in seeing it used in ministry. Traveling the Conference on speaking appointments is also something he enjoys, because it allows him to connect with churches and discover their needs for support and growth.
